CGLR’S NETWORKED LEARNING FOR LEADERSHIP ENGAGEMENT AND ACTION STRATEGY OFFERS SIX NETWORK ENGAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES
Campaign for Grade-Level Reading
A Reciprocal Partnership & Engagement Opportunity

CGLR's Networked Learning for Leadership Engagement and Action Strategy combines the pathways for learning and action across the GLR networks. These pathways include weekly webinars, communities of practice, road testing innovative models and ideas, distilling lessons for distribution and more.

Within and beyond our networks, the learning from our work in community is multi-dimensional and is occurring in multi-directional ways, creating the opportunity for our networks to learn with and from each other, for our networks to learn from external partners, and for external partners to learn from our networks. These networks include CGLR’s community stakeholder constituencies – coalition leading organizations, local funders and funder coalitions, and program partners – all exploring innovative tools and guides, programs, frameworks, research and reports and new ideas and insights. The learning continues as these constituencies road-test, implement and spread these programs, tools and ideas in their communities and, most importantly, as we learn about the impact these efforts are having on the lives of children and their families.

Engaging our networks to share their lessons with the developers, thinkers and creators of these programs, tools and ideas is a powerful way to improve and/or accelerate our efforts. This reciprocal learning and engagement opportunity have inspired CGLR to expand and formalize its relationships with philanthropic partners and their grantees in the spirit of deepening our learning together on behalf of the families and the children we serve.

Below are the six learning opportunities that are part of our Networked Learning for Leadership Engagement and Action strategy:

1. Learning for Impact and Improvement Platform (CLIP) is CGLR’s online platform that serves to harness and use the collective experience and wisdom of the GLR networks of communities, funders and partners.
2. What’s Working (WW) XChange is CGLR’s vehicle for encouraging communities to share real-time stories and snapshots of emerging and promising efforts to meet local challenges.
3. Communities of Practice offer local coalition leaders the opportunity to engage in deep-dive learning with each other on frameworks, innovations, ideas, and tools showing promise.
4. GLR Learning Tuesdays is a weekly webinar learning series where we explore the best science, ideas and programs informed, inspired and energized by a diverse array of speakers. The various series include a focus on science, parents, emerging models, learning loss recovery and more.
5. Funder-to Funder (F2F) Conversations offer an opportunity for shared learning, collaboration and even co-investment between and among local funders with their more “national” counterparts.
6. Crucible of Practice Salons provide a “deep-dive” exploration of how community coalitions are approaching and moving the work to improve the early school success prospects of children from economically challenged families, neighborhoods and communities.
